Effective August 31, 2010, Intel will no longer obtain or sustain the China CCC certifications on Intel's server sub-assembly chassis products. These products do not fall into the scope or catalogue of products requiring China CCC certifications; as these products are considered not fully integrated and are completely non-operational (e.g. no peripheral drives, memory, processors, add-in cards, etc). Please contact your local Intel representative if you have any questions regarding this notice.

This WEEE mark change is for the German scope interpretation of WEEE. WEEE is the European Union (EU) Directive regarding waste management of electrical and electronic equipment.

Please refer the following link for more information about Intel's WEEE Directive Recycling Program:

The Belarus certification is not required until January 1, 2011 thus Intel decided to not apply / maintain the Belarus certification at this time. This Belarus mark removal will not affect any import to Belarus.

The current Korean certifications are still valid. The Korean certifier changed the Korean certification mark from MIC to KCC and requested certification holders to update the marking at their earliest convenience.

Customer Impact of Change and Recommended Action:

Customers may need to determine the need for the China Compulsory Certification (CCC) on their products before they are exported to or sold in the Peoples Republic of China market.
